Igigo Wu (*1999)
Taiwanese artist, based in Zurich/Taipei

Igigo Wu is a multi-disciplinary Taiwanese artist based in Zürich, whose work spans painting, drawing, photography, writing, and experimental film. Her practice delves into identity, history, and memory, uncovering the brutal truths embedded in these constructs. Rooted in the intersections of modern violence and post-colonial legacies, Wu's evolving paintings serve as ecosystems of consciousness and inquiry. Wu's works navigate the intangible space of unspeakable violence and repressed memory, where history is lived, distorted, and reclaimed. Through a philosophical and anthropological approach, she critiques systems of power and challenges how memory and freedom are constructed. Recently, Wu has returned to painting, embracing the medium as an act of rebellion in a digitalized world. For her, painting resists technological overwhelm, offering a powerful tool to reimagine narratives of the past and present.
